Disposal and Recycling Rates in King County

The latest information on disposal and recycling rates in King County (except Seattle and Milton)

In 2001, King County residents and businesses disposed of 936,505 tons of waste that ended up at the Cedar Hills Landfill.

- About 58% of the waste comes from households - from single-family residences (1 to 4 units) and from multi-family buildings (5 or more units).
- About 42% of the waste comes from non-residential sources - businesses, industry, government, and institutions.
- The per capita disposal rate (total tons disposed/total population) is 0.45 tons or 900 pounds per year.
- The household disposal rate (residential tons/# of households) is 1.19 tons or 2,380 pounds per year.
- The non-residential disposal rate (non-residential tons/# of employees) is 0.61 tons or 1,220 pounds per year.

The information below provides additional detail about 2001 single-family (1 to 4 units) residential curbside recycling, yard waste and garbage.

Overall, 47% of the waste generated and collected curbside was recycled and composted - 24% was yard waste and 23% was recyclable materials (glass, tin, aluminum, plastic PET and HDPE, old newspapers, mixed paper and corrugated cardboard).
